Improvement of employability
An offer for small and medium sized companies gesunde ARBEIT.

september 2008

ill employees – what now?

demographic development – are we prepared?

healthy company?

The project

The project Gesunde Arbeit (healthy work) intends to install regional advisory boards and coordinating centres for small and medium sized companies in selected model regions. These contact points give free advice to companies concerning health problems of individual employees or occupational health structures yet to be set up. They find suitable partners for carrying out special measures and coordinate solutions with rehabilitation and prevention fund providers.

Demand and solution oriented implementation

The companies determine the demand for and key aspects of services. At the same time, an implementation as unbureaucratic and precisely fitting as possible is intended.

Companies seek ...

support from one single professional advisory board, that works in a solution oriented manner and that responds to the companies' ideas.

Companies receive support on subjects relating to "employment and health"

In addition to the subjects

- health and safety at work
- vocational health promotion and
- return to work,

questions regarding the following points are also answered by the advisory boards:

- human resource development and organisation development
- demographic development and
- employment promotion measures

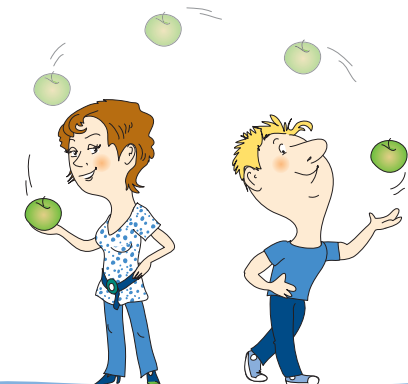

The advantage for your company

- decline in illness-related absences
- strengthening of productivity
- conservation of manpower up to retirement age
- lower employee turnover
- increased customer satisfaction

Result: A healthy company

Everyone benefits from healthy companies!

- employers
- providers of funds for prevention and rehabilitation
- employees
- social security systems
